Cold Storage Planks

In the progressive political market there is a marked scarcity of live issues and the price is steadily rising. Offices cannot be obtained without a generous supply of issues, and without offices no party can be expected to thrive, excepting of course, the prohibitionists, who subsist on the very hopelessness of their single issue; a few offices judiciously distributed might wreck their whole party organization.

Under existing market conditions the so-called progressives have been forced to subsist largely on cold storage issues, and some of these are far from palatable. Just now there is a surprising demand among the progressive republicans for a new basis of representation in the national conventions that shall curtail the number of delegates from the democratic states of the south. This is brought forward as a new issue, the product of the last national campaign, but it was in cold storage when the average American voter was born. If this is to be advanced as a basis of harmony, then harmony should be easily re-established, for it was the antagonistic attitude of ex-President Roosevelt and his immediate followers that prevented the adoption of such a plan twelve years ago.

Senator Quay of Philadelphia was an early protagonist of this movement. He fought for it in 1900, asserting that the basis of representation should be bona fide republican votes in place of federal office holders. Strangely enough, this was denounced as "reactionary doctrine," and the progressive wing of the republican party prevented its adoption.

Members of the republican national committee agitated this question in 1904, but it was still under the Roosevelt ban. He who was about to be nominated frowned on the suggestion and it was referred to as a plot of the reactionaries to stifle progress.

In 1906 there was a real fight for this change of basis of representation. Every delegate pledged to Knox, Cannon, Fairbanks and Hughes voted for it. Barnes of New York, Hemmenway of Indiana, Lorimer of Illinois and their entire following lined up in favor of this change in representation. But Roosevelt feared that it might affect his plan to name his successor and he gave the order that it must be beaten. The fight was a close one, but the administration forces prevailed and the "reactionaries" were routed.

Now come the leaders of the progressive republicans with the demand that this change in the basis of representation must be made or there can be no uniting of the two factions in the republican party. And, of course, the Colonel is its prime protagonist.

The Colonel Says: "Splendid"

If Colonel Roosevelt is pleased with the results of the trial that made Marquette famous, it would be useless for the rest of us to butt in. There is no question as to the verdict, and there can be little as to the evidence, for the character of the witnesses called makes it certain that the reports of the Colonel's overindulgence were not true. But his own testimony on the stand and that of his cousin to the effect that he keeps a "gentleman's cellar" is not likely to get him an absolute acquittal in the minds of those extremely dry people who hold that total abstinence is the only rule.

But having accepted the testimony to the effect that Colonel Roosevelt was maligned by the people who said he got drunk, it occurs to us that we are driven to the conclusion that he has the most ungovernable and inexcusable temper that ever cursed ambitious mortal. People on the Pacific coast have not yet forgotten the exhibition of it that marked his outburst at Portland last year, over the loss of a book he was reading. It disappeared and according to dispatches he raved at the hotel proprietor and at everybody in sight, and if he had been under the influence of something else than water from the slopes of Mt. Hood, he could not have made a more ungentlemanly spectacle of himself. There is some license allowed the individual in his cups that does not extend to the man who is master of himself.

In spite of the fact that California's anti-alien land holding bill conforms strictly to our treaty with Japan, and even grants the Japanese greater privileges than the treaty provides for, the eastern press is filled with denunciations of California as bringing dishonor upon the nation through the treaty defying provisions of its legislation. No doubt it is that sort of fool talk which gives Ambassador Chinda his impudence in putting up to our administration the cheeky demand that Japan's desires must be complied with.

European diplomats are said to discuss among themselves with good-natured raillery Secretary Bryan's idea that the signing of an agreement among nations to "wait awhile" before beginning war, would bring peace. It is pointed out that a nation determined on war could make good use of a delay in preparing for the struggle, while its intended opponent, relying on the guarantee, might be taken unawares and at a disadvantage.

The American rush for gold is well exemplified by the rush which has begun to Seward peninsula, Alaska. But with what grief and gnashing of teeth most Pinckney and his cronies view the taking out of gold in Alaska by the prospectors. How they must bewail the fact that this gold is being taken out now instead of being left for the taking of some indefinite generation of Americans yet to appear!

John P. Morgan offers his father's art collection in the Metropolitan Museum of Art for a temporary loan exhibition, and the managers of the museum accept. The ultimate disposal of that art collection is probably foreshadowed in this transaction, though both parties specifically provide that the present loan shall not in any way bind either party as to that final disposal.

CAPE HORN ON S P WILL BE TUNNELED

The Southern Pacific company, which is double tracking and generally straightening the road bed, has decided to run a tunnel through the mountain at a point known as Cape Horn, one of the most scenic places along the Sierra Nevada. The work has already started and inside of a year the famous point of observation will be left to one side. The new tunnel will be 1300 feet long, shortening the distance something over a mile. It is better time and less grade that the roads are looking for and not scenic effects.

TO DETERMINE VALIDITY OF MINING OPERATIONS

The Western Pacific railway is fighting the validity of mining locations at Gerlach, and a hearing is on at the Carson land office.

Advice to Those Who Have Lung Trouble

Pulmonary lung trouble is said to be curable by simply living in the open air and taking an abundance of fresh eggs and milk. Do all you possibly can to add to strength and increase weight; eat wholesome, nourishing food; breathe the cleanest and purest air, and then if health and strength do not return and the tonic and beneficial effects of Eckman's Alternative. Read what it did in this case:

495 E. 5th St., Wilmington, Del. "Gentlemen: In January, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs. I took eggs and milk in quantities, but I got very weak. Mr. U. A. Hippelott, my employer (Lippincott & Co., Department Store, 296 to 314 Market Street, Wilmington, Del.) recommended to me Eckman's Alternative, and upon his suggestion I began taking it at once. This was about June, 1909. I continued faithfully, using no other remedy, and finally noticed the clearing of the lungs. I firmly believe Eckman's Alternative saved my life." (Affidavit J. A. Squire.)

(Above abbreviated; more on request.) Eckman's Alternative has been proven by many years' use to be most efficacious in cases of severe throat and lung affections, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, stubborn colds and in rebuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

If you bought nothing but advertised goods during the next twelve months, you'd reduce the cost and raise the standard of living—surprisingly!

AUTO OWNERS ARE NOW SECURING LICENSES

Auto owners are gradually coming in and securing their state licenses according to the Carson Appeal. At the present time 685 licenses have been secured from the secretary of state, which is probably about one quarter of the number of machines owned in the state.

It seems to be up to the county authorities to enforce the law. The sheriff of this county has announced that he will stop every car without a license and hold the same till the licenses are purchased. If every sheriff in the state does this the full number of machines will be carrying their numbers and the road fund will grow in consequence.

ROAD TRAVERSING NEVADA DESIRES TO ISSUE BONDS

The San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad company has applied to the California railroad commission for authority to issue $1,115,000 in bonds for the purpose of purchasing additional equipment, enlarging terminal facilities and constructing a short branch line in Nevada.

The road runs through the southern part of the state and is best known as the Clark line.
